PINK PANTHERS GROUP

PARTNERSHIP, PERFORMANCE AND A CUSTOMER FOR LIFE

For Pink Panthers Group Founder and CEO Nemanja Delic, trucking has always been about more than moving freight. It is about people, relationships and finding a way forward—even when the road ahead is anything but predictable.

Delic took over a small trucking company originally started by his brother in 2008. On August 1, 2017, working from a small Chicago apartment, he assumed control of the business and set out to build something of his own.

That company became Pink Panthers Group. Today, headquartered in Carrollton, Texas, Pink Panthers has grown into a multifaceted transportation and logistics organization. The company primarily operates trucking and freight brokerage services throughout the United States, along with a small leasing operation and a growing technology division. Its footprint also extends internationally, with offices in Mexico, Colombia and Serbia.

"I recognize Volvo as the most reliable brand that I've ever dealt with."

Nemanja Delic, Founder
Pink Panthers Group

STANDING OUT IN THE INDUSTRY

Even the Pink Panthers name has a story. Delic says it was inspired by his grandfather's favorite movies when he was growing up.

In an industry filled with transportation companies, the distinctive name and branding help Pink Panthers stand apart. But Delic says what truly differentiates the company is the relationships it has built with drivers, customers, vendors and other partners.

"We don't mess around when it comes to getting the job done," Delic said. "We're available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. All our partnerships are extremely important to us."

Pink Panthers also continues to invest in its future. After struggling to find fleet-management software that met the company's needs, Delic decided to develop an in-house solution—a project that has been roughly five years in the making.

That entrepreneurial spirit is something Bruckner's Truck & Equipment Sales Representative Colby Mann has seen firsthand.

"He is constantly seeking a way to better his business," Mann said. "His entrepreneurial spirit is what has made him a fantastic partner to Bruckner's and the Volvo brand."

About 70 percent of the Pink Panthers fleet is comprised of Volvo Trucks.

> "Every single time a driver takes a Volvo, they never bring back the Volvo. The drivers love them because of the comfort, and as the owners, obviously we love them because of the reliability. It's a win-win."

BUILT ON VOLVO

Today, Pink Panthers operates approximately 55 power units, with Delic estimating about 70 percent of the fleet is Volvo. After 17 years in transportation and experience with numerous truck, engine and transmission platforms, Delic has developed a strong preference. "I recognize Volvo as the most reliable brand that I've ever dealt with," he said.

Pink Panthers runs sleepers and has long favored the Volvo VNL. Delic says drivers appreciate the comfort, while ownership values reliability.

He has even challenged skeptical drivers to spend a week in a Volvo before switching back to their preferred truck. "Every single time that they take the Volvo, they never bring back the Volvo," Delic said. "The drivers love them because of the comfort, and as the owners, obviously we love them because of the reliability. It's a win-win."

A CUSTOMER FOR LIFE

Pink Panthers' relationship with Bruckner's began during one of the industry's most difficult equipment markets.

During the COVID-era truck shortage, Delic's team was searching dealerships nationwide for available equipment. One of those calls reached Bruckner's in Denver. There were no trucks available at the time, but the salesperson promised to call if that changed. About a month later, he did. Five Mack trucks had become available. Delic had little previous experience with Mack, but trusted the recommendation and agreed to purchase them.

What stayed with him most was how Bruckner's handled the transaction. At a time when Delic says equipment prices were being dramatically increased because of demand, Bruckner's offered what he considered a fair, market-level deal.

"He could have taken advantage of us during that time, and he did not," Delic recalled. "I told him, because of that, you're going to have a customer for life."

Six years later, Pink Panthers still owns those five Mack trucks, and Delic says they have proven to be excellent performers.

As Pink Panthers' business shifted to Texas, the company began working with Mann and Bruckner's Dallas location. Delic says the same commitment to the customer has continued.

"He really does fight for us as a customer," Delic said. "He always does the best that he can to get us the best price possible on trucks."

STILL TRUCKING

Years of industry volatility have taught Delic to be cautious about predicting what comes next. Instead, Pink Panthers remains focused on staying lean, adaptable and prepared for whatever challenges lie ahead. "We're the lifeblood of America," Delic said of the trucking industry. "We're the American dream at its fullest."

For him, continuing to operate, provide jobs and support the families who depend on Pink Panthers is an accomplishment in itself.

"It's great to be alive, and it's great to be able to continue to keep trucking," he said. "We're humble to have gotten through what we've gone through, and we thank God every single day that we can continue to operate and do business."

Through changing markets, evolving technology and a growing footprint, Pink Panthers continues moving forward—built on resilience, entrepreneurship and partnerships designed for the long haul.
